30 June 2017 Interdisciplinary Conference

G-20-pre-summit activity

Governing Europe in Times of Crisis

Dear colleagues, students, friends, ladies and gentlemen,

The G 7 summit recently held in Taormina, Italy (May 26 and 27, 2017) has raised many worries about preserving European and transatlantic unity on global challenges such as economic governance, security policies or migration issues. When the Trump administration focuses on “America first” and the United Kingdom is about to leave the European Union, many certainties for a long time taken as given become uncertain all of a sudden. Things will not get easier when on July 7 and 8 the G 20 group is assembling in Hamburg for their twelfth meeting. Given the frictions between the relevant political actors and a most demanding agenda on global financial and economic policies, straightforward solutions are most unlikely. The German presidency will without any doubt face difficult tasks. Being very aware of these, Chancellor Angela Merkel explicitly demanded that Europe – more than ever before – has to take responsibility for its own destiny. The consequences for and the impact on European Governance might be immense.

An interdisciplinary conference, jointly organized by Hamburg University, Europa-Kolleg Hamburg, and the Friedrich A. von Hayek Gesellschaft e.V. on the eve of the Hamburg summit (June 30, 2017), therefore takes up some of the most urgent questions of “Governing Europe in Times of Crisis”. Following an opening panel on “Differentiated Integration: A Future Approach to Governing Europe” we will discuss three crucial fields of reference: “Governing Refugees”, “Governing the Eurozone”, and “Governing Security”. Kick-off presentations by leading international experts in the fields of law, economics and politics will be commented by advanced students and discussed with all conference participants.

We hope to have aroused your interest and are looking forward to your participation.
